Know this! - The APBT do fight.

At Manjaro's I'm seriously astonished and tired of the "constant myth" that "real American Pit Bull terriers" can be raised and trained to be non-dog or animal aggressive and be friendly to any and every dog – especially will be dog friendly then living in harmony with other dogs in and on the same premises.

I would personally love to have an APBT dog that can walk and live alongside other dogs without issues, but I chose to own the "real" APBT and its therefore my duty to be a responsible owner as it is yours if you do.

Therefore I will not white wash or sugarcoat Manjaro APBT's and will not lie that "real" APBT game dogs can be part of your other dogs - in in a "pack situation" in and on your yard or premises ... as a pack animal.

Firstly, you can't raise an animal (the APBT) the "right way" - whatever that may be (then more so the APBT) if that is what you believe...

Fact >> you have to constantly manage your dog's behaviour - they raise themselves.

You will and may love it, provide for it, socialize it, and train it, but you don't raise it as you would your child ... if you disagree that's cool, we all have our own views and opinions and I will agree to disagree with you peacefully – but will stand by my own convictions and always state the truth about this breed... no matter what.

Secondly there's a word called "genetics"... go Google it and familiarized yourself on the meaning of "genetics" and hopefully this will give you a clearer, better understanding of what's to follow.

No amount of training, socializing and stimulation can or will remove the "genetics" ... especially if you own a breed like the APBT breed or any other breed that was historically and genetically bred as working dog and for combat, if you disagree with this then you will be responsible for the dire consequences this breed faces.

I don't disagree with "socializing" (I do a vigorous socializing effort with my pups from 2 weeks old ... when still with the mother ... and up to 8 weeks old when pups are ready to go - I highly recommend it, but this does not mean you will own a APBT dog that will not display certain traits when the needs or opportunity arise, it's not a "given" that you now own a Labrador type and or a non-dog to dog aggressive dog dressed as a Pit Bull, a APBT that will never bite another dog.

I'm not labelling this (the APBT) breed as a monster - not in a month of Sundays, nor as a man eater nor a killer but hear this- it's your (as APBT dog owner's) responsibility to keep your dog or dogs safe – safely confined and to keep other humans and animals safe, not the other way around.

You owe it to your APBT dog not to set them up to fail, because they will bear the consequence of your errors and then you will be responsible and accountable - this is why I feel so strongly about not sugar coating this breed.

Yes (sounds rough) – yes it might not happen to you, then again it might, and almost guaranteed that it will, (and having “real game bred APBT’s ... it is almost a surety - but when it does ... do not let your dog down for doing what it was meant to – “genetically”.

Stay educated, don't become complacent and never let your “best friend you're APBT” down because they will never let you down!
