Physaloptera through the ingestion of a beetle.

Similar in appearance to roundworms, "physaloptera" are transmitted to dogs through the ingestion of a beetle.

If a dog eats a beetle, the larvae have the opportunity to mature within the dog's body.

Physaloptera don't usually cause severe disease, but if infection occurs your dog may experience vomiting, diarrhoea, loss of appetite and bleeding in the stomach.

If and your dog through the stress of treatment.
